

The Facebook currency:

DATA

Facebook does not charge people for using its service.

However, Facebook uses their data by selling these to companies across the globe in the form of personalised ad spaces.

The rule here is: the more personalised a user profile, the more expensive an ad space can be sold. Every piece of user information therefore equates income for Facebook.

